

Statement on Directive "California Proposition 65 - Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act" from 1986.

Our company Heinrichs & Co. KG is a manufacturer of turned parts that are used in components such as gearboxes, engines, axles, drives, valve blocks and other technical constructions in the automotive and mechanical engineering sectors.

The above-mentioned law is an initiative of the State of California to address the growing concern about exposure to harmful chemicals. It is intended to ensure that no person knowingly and intentionally exposes an individual to chemicals known to the State of California to be carcinogenic or toxic to reproduction in the course of his or her business activities without first providing that individual with a clear and reasonable warning.

To implement the law, the State of California has published, among other things, a list of chemicals suspected of being carcinogenic or toxic to reproduction.

The list currently contains more than 1,000 chemicals.

Our products may contain small traces of listed substances such as e.g. nickel or lead.

The sale and use of these substances or products containing these substances is not prohibited by California Proposition 65. We would like to point out that the use of our products may result in further obligations for you as a customer.

The list and further information on California Proposition 65 can be found on the website of the California government (<https://www.p65warnings.ca.gov/>) and the California Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment (<https://oehha.ca.gov/proposition-65>).

For any further questions please do not hesitate to ask your contact persons at our company.
